ALLEN HERMAN, University of Regina
The Rings of Generalized Groups

"Generalized Groups" (Hecke algebras and non-commutative association schemes being two examples of interest) are algebraic structures that share many of the algebraic and representation-theoretic properties of finite groups, and some useful additional properties as well. Rather than try give a survey of what has become a vast subject, I will present a few illustrative examples.