
ROBERT BILLINSKI, Collège Montmorency

Different approach to computer labs

What is the objective of a computer lab? How proficient does a student need to be to “perform”? What is the student learning: math, computer usage skills, software...? This talk will not have all the answers but will have some down-to-earth analysis to propose. A handful of actual examples of computer labs will be used to illustrate the variety of approaches possible and the range of objectives that labs seem to be able to have.